Lamar, CO – Thursday, September 12th - Residents of Wiley and the surrounding area joined employees of the Wiley Clinic, representatives of the Lamar Chamber of Commerce and Lamar Honkers to celebrate the re-opening of the Clinic with a ribbon-cutting ceremony Monday afternoon, September 9.

High Plains Community Health Center hosted the gathering which gave people a chance to visit with Dr. John Abbott and staff members and view the Clinic's facilities. Executive Director Jay Brooke stated that he was pleased the Clinic could serve the western section of Prowers County. He said the Clinic's re-opening should also make it easier for residents from Bent and Kiowa Counties to receive continued medical care. Abbott said he was happy that the same health care opportunities offered at High Plains, would be made available to Wiley area residents.

The Clinic is open Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at 302 South Main Street, next to the Post Office. Call for office hours at 719-829-4286.

County Discusses Emergency Trailer Responsibilities, Sells Antique Wagons

How to best share an emergency operations trailer among county responders was the topic of discussion for Prowers County Commissioners Thursday, September 12, with Staffon Warn, Emergency Operations Manager for the County and Prowers County Sheriff Jim Faull. The trailer is owned by the county, but was recently donated to the City of Lamar Fire and Ambulance Department with some provisions in the offer. The county will continue to license and insure the trailer, while the city will continue to upgrade and outfit the operating and communications equipment for it. Lamar Fire Chief Marshall Cook informed the Lamar City Council this past Monday, September 9, that it would take several years to do, working from his operations budget. The idea is that other responders in Holly, Wiley and Granada could also use the trailer for their emergency needs.

Commission Chairman, Joe Marble, asked Warn and Faull if the best place to store the trailer would be the east parking lot, off the County Courthouse and who would be in charge of the keys or would sign out the trailer when a need arose? Marble said that as the County Sheriff, Faull would be the first choice. He recommended a joint meeting with each municipality to iron out specifics, not excluding Bent or Baca County representatives. Marble said a basic intergovernmental agreement would be needed to eliminate any confusion of responsibilities in years to come.

Kelly Emick, history professor at Lamar Community College, was granted the loan of three antique wagons owned by the county and stored at the Big Timbers Museum. Emick said the wagons would be used to help showcase activities for the 2013 LCC History Encampment set for October 4-5 at the campus. The idea for the Encampment was initiated by Emick's mother, Professor Judy Arnold in 2005 and has since been held every two years at the college.

Four of the county's antique wagons have been sold. Bids were opened during the Thursday commissioner's meeting and based on high bid; the wagons were awarded for sale to Leon Sparks, Burt Davis and Greg Emick. Total purchase price was $1,731.25. Fees for use of the fairgrounds for two Sand and Sage Round Up Royalty meetings were waived at the request of Wynter Dorenkamp, who organizes the contests.

Susan Crites, President of the Lamar Historical Society discussed signage issues for the Big Timbers Museum. She said some work needs to be done on the main entrance and exits to the parking lot, as some visitors are using the old areas. "I'm afraid someone will take the wrong turn and end up high centering their car," she explained. The commissioners said they'd budget some split rail fencing to close those gaps. Crites said long term items included signage for handicapped parking and a lighted sign over the west door of the Transportation Museum. A programmable LED sign, similar to the one used for the Granada Amache project was a consideration, pending grant funding.

The 2014 County Holiday List was approved by the commissioners who noted that the same numbers of days as 2013 were okayed, including the November election day. By Russ Baldwin

LCC Hosting 5th Frontier History Encampment

Every two years since 2005, a time machine at Lamar Community College drops back over 200 years revealing almost a century of Western Americana between 1800 and 1890, brought to life.

Visitors can enrich their understanding of how the way things were, October 4 and 5 at LCC during the bi-annual Frontier History Encampment. Dozens of re-enactors from around the region set up their particular site on the LCC campus and display a segment of life on the plains. A comprehensive portrayal of the timeline is showcased through displays of native Americans of early and late 1800's; early fur trappers and traders, blacksmiths, buffalo hunters and frontiersmen, homesteaders, cavalry, artillery and infantry from the Civil War era, gunfighters and gamblers and ranch life of the late 1800's is depicted. Visitors can watch a blacksmith make a nail, see homestead wives dye clothing using roots and vegetables, watch a cannon crew fire off live rounds, learn how settlers lived in sod houses or the manner in which gamblers plied their trade.

Kelly Emick, history professor at LCC and Butch Kelly, have been staging the encampment every two years and watching the crowds continue to grow. Emick recently spoke with the Prowers County Commissioners about how the attendance has been growing. "This time, we're hosting members of the state Board of Community Colleges," she explained. She said an event of this scope is not common for a smaller community college such as LCC. But last year, there were 1,000 visitors for the two day event and the Encampment is now hosting scheduled field trips. She said, "In 2011 we had 300 students come visit and this year, we're making arrangements with home schooled students to come view us. We have Burlington school students who are making the trip this year."

The Encampment is free of charge, but it still takes money to put on. "We pay out about $12,500 for the two day event and that covers the costs of the re-enactors who put this on," she explained, adding, "Butch Kelly organizes the interpreters and this year we're seeing those numbers grow to include an entry from New Mexico who will represent the, 'Army of the West'. This is a Mexican/American fighting unit that existed between 1846 to 1848." The college helps fund half the expenses and Emick said there are private contributors, but with a couple of weeks to go, the funding is about $2,000 short of their goal. The one thing they won't do is charge for admission, not even a donation jar. "We want to make this a community event and we'll work to make sure we meet all our bills, but we don't want the public to feel a financial obligation when they come out to see the event," she said.

Hours on Friday, October 4 will be from noon to 5pm and Saturday will be all day, from 9am to 5pm. Contact Emick at 719-336-1532 for additional information. By Russ Baldwin
