Yard Sale Tips & Tricks 1 – Pricing Your Items

Once you have gathered all of your items to sell, the next step is to price everything. When setting prices for all your items, remember that your customers are going to yard sales looking for a good deal. With this in mind, items should be priced at 10-30% of their original price. This is just a general rule, however, and you should also consider the condition of the piece and its popularity. For example, customers will typically be willing to pay more for brand name clothing in good repair. A good rule of thumb is to think about how much you would be willing to pay for the same item if you were buying it from someone else's yard sale.

When pricing your yard sale inventory, take a minute to think about your price tags. Make all of your price tags easy to see and find on the item. You might choose to use bright colored stickers or simply use masking tape, but be sure to make it easily visible. Larger items should have bigger price tags as well so that they are easy to find. For example, a small sticker may make a great price tag for a mug or sweater, but that same sticker would be hard to find on a couch.

Tips & Tricks 2 – Making Your Signs Count

When planning for your yard sale, don't forget signs. Signs not only direct customers to your sale, they also serve as easy advertising.

Your signs should be sturdy and easy to read from a distance. Instead of plain paper which is fairly flimsy, use cardboard to keep the signs from folding over in the wind. Be sure to write clearly and in large letters. Bright colors can catch the eye of a potential customer, but you should never let colors and decoration get in the way of your message.

If you live in a hard to find area, consider posting several signs leading your customers from a main roadway to your sale. Make sure all your signs match, so that the signs are easy to see and follow. If you do this, you might mention it in your advertising stating "Follow the orange signs."

Test out your signs by posting one and then driving by to see if you can read the sign from the road. If you can, then you've created a great yard sale sign!

When posting your signs around town, be sure to comply with the codes and ordinances of the City of Lamar. You can find this information in the Home Rule Charter and Code of the City of Lamar, Colorado.
